Jennifer Stuart, PhD is the 2015-16 Helen Meyers Traveling Scholar, a distinction awarded by the American Psychoanalytic Association. She is a faculty member at the Institute for Psychoanalytic Education (IPE), affiliated with NYU Medical Center, where she teaches Freud's cases and clinical case writing. She serves on the editorial boards of JAPA, The Psychoanalytic Quarterly, Psychoanalytic Inquiry and Psychoanalytic Psychology, and on the Board of the Sigmund Freud Archives. In 2006, Dr. Stuart received the Karl A. Menninger Memorial Award for a paper on the experience of conflict between work and motherhood. Dr. Stuart has also published on the mutual influences of procreation and other forms of creative work; how physical evidence of a therapist's pregnancy shapes clinical process; what happens when a psychoanalytic patient brings his or her infant to sessions; and the possible distorting influence of Freud's early relationship with his mother on his understanding of himself and his patients.

If interested, RSVP to Abby Hawkins at ahawkins@philanalysis.org by Wed., March 2!
